FRANK ARRUDA, WANTED IN CONNECTION WITH KILLING HERE; TAKEN BY OFFICERS

Older Brother Serving Life Term for Murder of Two at Newark

Blurting out his identity after an hour's questioning on suspicion of petty theft, Frank Arruda, 18, arrested at San Leandro told officers that he was wanted as an accomplice in the murder of his stepfather, Joseph Bento, Newark rancher, and Bento's son, Joseph, Jr. The double killing took place on September 6, 1933.

Arruda, who with his elder brother, Manuel, assertedly shot and killed the rancher and his son, was taken into custody when Police Inspector Lloyd Tice broke down his alias. Tice was called to San Leandro to investigate a series of petty thefts, finding on his arrival a cache of goods, assertedly belonging to a boy known as "Jimmy Rogers." Questioning revealed the youth's identity.

Authorities in Washington township, although they stated that a complaint against the youth was sworn here at the time of the killings, did not know if charges

MOTHER OF DECOTO CIVIC LEADER SUCCUMBS

Long months of illness ended Sunday in death for Mrs. Isabel Thomas, mother of Frank Thomas, Decoto civic leader. The elderly woman passed away at her home in Oakland.

Funeral services were held Tuesday from the Garden Chapel, at Hayward, with interment following at the St. Joseph's cemetery.

Mrs. Thomas was the wife of the late Frank J. Thomas, Sr., and the mother of Mrs. Mary F. Vierra, Manuel F., Joseph L., Antone S., and Frank Thomas. Another daughter, Mrs. Mary Phipps preceded her in death. She is also survived by two sisters, Mrs. Mary Caton, of Newman, and Mrs. Mary J. Fraga, of Oakland.

Mrs. Thomas was a member of the S. P. R. S. I. council 89, of Oakland, and of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Auxiliary No. 188, of Hayward.

MAKE HOME HERE

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Adams and daughter have moved from San Jose, where they formerly made their home, to 141 North Main street, Centerville. They came here in order that Adams could be near his business. He recently purchased the Centerville Ford agency from Furtado and Bettencourt.

The Rev. Father Barron, of Oakland, visited with Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Rose, at Niles, Friday.

DRUNK DRIVER GETS 50-DAY SENTENCE AT NILES COURT

Convicted of drunken driving when he appeared before Judge J. A. Silva at the Niles court house Monday, Paul Martinez, Alvarado man, is serving fifty days in the county jail. He was unable to raise the $100 fine asked by the court, and took the jail sentence instead.

Martinez was arrested last week-end by Deputy Sheriff James Ritchie. There was no accident involved.

UNSATISFACTORY DUCK SEASON TO CLOSE AT 4 P. M.

It'll soon be over.

For the ducks, we mean. The season will close this afternoon at 4 o'clock, and the harrassed waterfowl will persue their solitary ways undisturbed for another year.

All in all, the season in Washington township was an unsatisfactory one, hunters conclude, with a scarcity of birds in the local marshes.

The enthusiastic Nimrod, however, will not be without his sport, with quail season in full swing. Game Warden Fred Rogers reports that the rotund birds are not too plentiful, and states that hunters who bag their limits will deserve them. The birds are "working" strangely this year, Rogers points out, in that they do not light quickly when flushed, but fly far, far away from the hunter.

TERM ENDS TOMORROW WITH OPERETTA AT GRAMMAR SCHOOL

Ending the fall term in a galaxy of color, the operetta "The Gift of Christmas," will be produced tomorrow night at the Niles Grammar school. Preparations for the event, in which the entire faculty has participated, will be completed today.

The production, staged as four tableaux, depicts familiar Christmas customs, with the four scenes linked together by Lorraine Peterson, Laura Lee Zwissig, Betty Murphy and Ilene Wittenmeyer, who will play the roles of Mary, Faith, Hope and Love.

Other children to take part are: Leon Vieux, Albert Silva, Clayton George, who will give individual performances. The cast is made up of children from all grades.

TOWNSEND PLAN TO BE SUBJECT OF CHAMBER TALK

With their interest mounting in the Townsend plan, members of the Niles Chamber of Commerce voted Monday to have a speaker address them on the subject at next Monday's meeting, and decided to open the meeting to all who care to attend.

A. J. Petsche, secretary, contacted J. J. Alberg, president of the local Townsend club, and through him secured F. G. Cox, of Oakland, as the speaker. Cox will stress the phases of taxation to make the plan workable, and will point out various channels of expenditure that will be eliminated.

The meeting will be held at 12 noon Monday, at the Florence restaurant. Cox, who has addressed the local club here on several occasions, is known as a leading radio speaker on the plan.

SEWER BOARD LOOKS OVER ENGINEER'S CONTRACT

Members of the Decoto Sanitary district board stated this week that a special meeting may be called soon to consider acceptance of a contract submitted by J. Manchini, engineer. The contract, received several days ago, has been submitted to the district attorney, for his approval.

If the contract is accepted by the board, Manchini will be engaged as engineer for the project, and will proceed with the preliminary work, including the advertising for bids. Date for the bond election, to supplement government funds, will be set later.

Paul Power Winner In Christmas Story Contest

Paul Power, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Power, of Irvington, was awarded a $30 cash prize recently, when his Christmas story, entitled "Christmas Chronicle," was judged the best among hundreds submitted to the Monitor, Catholic newspaper. Power's story appeared in that publication on Thursday, December 12th.

Power, who intends to make journalism his life work, is active in publication work at the Washington Union High school. He is editor of the 1935 Washingtonian, school year book.

Miss Katherine Bliss, secretary at the Niles water office, is back at her work this week, after a short vacation. She took one week of her vacation during the summer, reserving the other week until the holiday season.

Mrs. H. R. Hunt will leave Saturday for Taft, where she will spend the Christmas holidays with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Waldner, and family. She will drive down with Miss Sally Waldner, University of California student.

PAIR TO FACE JURY TODAY ON DOUBLE COUNT

Valim and Principe To Answer Charges At Niles Court

Domingo Valim, 19, boxer, and E. P. Principe, 24, both of Hayward, will appear before a jury at the Niles courthouse today and tomorrow, on charges of battery and disturbing the peace, arising from an alleged battle in the Columbia grill last Wednesday night. Both pleaded not guilty to the charges.

According to witnesses, the free-for-all fistcuffs followed Principe's demand that Mrs. Katerine Wehren, dining with her husband and brother, dance with him. The Irvington woman declined, whereupon Principe became so insistent that her husband arose to protect his wife. Principe shoved Wehren, marking the start of a general brawl, in which Valim is alleged to have attacked James McHugh, Mrs. Wehren's brother. Mrs. Wehren, sensing that McHugh might be badly hurt by the ex-pugilist, broke a pretzel bowl over Vallm's head, inflicting wounds which necessitated hospital treatment.

In the meantime restaurant employees and others were try-

"Troubador" Gets Thirty Days After Disturbance

Proclaiming that he was a "bad boy" and a "wandering troubador," Joe Aguilar, 25, of Decoto, was arrested last week when he told officers that "he needed a spanking." Said to be in a happy alcholic daze, Aguilar, was creating a disturbance near a Decoto roadhouse. He was carrying a guitar, which he played lustily in the Hayward city jail, in accompaniment to "La Cucaracha," famous Mexican song. He declared that he had served in the Mexican army.

He was sentenced to thirty days in the county jail by Judge Jacob Harder, Jr.

KIDS WILL HAVE TIME OF LIVES AT MOVIE PARTY

Sam Kerns, junior chamber head, stated yesterday that arrangements with Santa Claus have been completed to have that jolly old man on hand for the huge theatre party next Tuesday afternoon. Santa, it seems, will arrive from the pole at the Oakland airport and will be escorted from there to Niles, where he will take up his station in the lobby of the Niles theatre to distribute candy to the children who attend. Norman Rose will be his helper.

Santa's automobile will be given a police escort, headed by Traffic Officer Duffy Lewis.

The party, slated to begin at 2:30 p. m., will be entirely free. Children of grammar school age will be admitted first, with their mothers, if the latter accompany them. High school students will be admitted last. The program will consist of a Mickey Mouse cartoon, skits by local talent, a Christmas play and a comedy film, the latter yet to be selected.

Games and contests among the children, with the winners to get valuable prizes, will have a place on the program.

Joe Pioletti, chairman, states that all is in readiness for the occasion.

BIRTHDAY FETE

Mr. and Mrs. August May, of Alvarado, entertained a number of guests Saturday evening, in honor of May's birthday. Among Niles people who attended was Miss Celeste Bunker.

Miss Gertrude Keller was a San Francisco visitor Saturday.

POSTS FETE ALUMNI FOOTBALLERS AT PLEASANTON

Headed by their commander, Manuel Swartz, a delegation of American Legion post members attended a banquet given by the Pleasanton post, at Pleasanton last week-end. The affair was in honor of the alumni football teams of the Amador and Washington High schools, which recently played a tie game on the Centerville turf.

Speakers of the evening included Abert Silveria, Washington coach and George Patterson, Pleasanton mentor. Swartz and Lon Ruppel, the latter commander of the Pleasanton post also spoke.

Musical entertainment was furnished by the Niles delegation. Movies of important coast conference football games were shown.

Among guests from Niles was Sam Kerns, who accompanied E. Dixon Bristow, past commander.

YULE DINNER WILL BE SERVED TODAY AT SCHOOL

Although it will be just another Christmas dinner to many of the tots, the Parent-Teacher Association Yule party will be a huge event in the lives of numerous grammar school children, to whom chicken, with all the fixings, is an unfamiliar dish. The dinner will be served in the Niles Grammar school cafeteria today.

To cost fifteen cents—if the tots can afford it—the dinner will be a complete one, according to Mrs. Frank Silva, chairman of the committee in charge. Mrs. Fred Nelson, Mrs. Harold Houghton, Mrs. L. L. Lewis and Mrs. Griffiths are other committeemen.

More than 17' children were served at the annual affair last year.

Examination All Set for 2 Local Postmasterships

J. L. Olson, Decoto postmaster, announced this week that civil service examinations will be held for the Decoto postmastership soon. Applications must be in Washington, D. C., on or before January 3, 1936. He stated that proper application blanks may be obtained at his office.

A similar examinaton will be held for the postmastership at Irvington, with the same regulations applying. Blanks may be had by calling at the Irvington post office. Mrs. Mildred Blacow is postmaster.

The examination will be held at Niles for both posts, it was announced yesterday by H. V. Fournier, Niles postmaster.

GASOLINE AND LANTERN CAUSE SUDDEN BLAZE

They'll do it every time!

This time it was with a lighted lantern, which became involved with a can of gasoline.

Tony and Dan Costa were the victims of the sudden blaze Sunday night on the Whipple ranch, across from the Zwissig dairy. They were transferring gasoline from one car to another at about 10 p. m., carrying on their operations in the light of an old fashioned lantern. The gas ignited, seriously burning Dan about the arms and face. He was treated by a Niles physician.

The Decoto firemen were called out and arrived in time to save the car, which was not badly damaged.

CHILD KILLED UNDER WHEELS OF TRUCK HERE

Little Rafael Morilla Crushed On Way to Local School

DRIVER IS RELEASED

Tragedy Brings Action By Civic Groups To Lessen Danger

Crushed beneath the wheels of a heavy grvel truck, Rafael Morilla, eight-yer-old Niles girl, was instantly killed Monday morning while on her way to school. The tragic accident occurred on the main highway, just opposite the canyon underpass.

Herbert C. Saunders, of Hayward, driver of the truck, operated by the Rosenberg Building Material Company, was released after questioning by police. It is said neither the driver nor the child sensed the danger until too late.

According to witnesses, the child waited at the side of the road near the underpass for a few moments, until traffic had apparently thinned, then ran across the pavement in an attempt to catch up with Ampara and Arthur Martinez, school children, who had already crossed. Seeing the heavy truck bearing down from the town, the Martinez children screamed a warning, heard too late by the unfortunate girl. Traffic approaching in the opposite drection made it impossible for the driver to swerve. The heavily-laden truck, enroute to the Kimber Poultry Farm, rolled many feet beyond the point where the child was struck. The body was immediately taken to the office of the deputy coroner at the Chapel of Palms, Centerville, where the inquest will be held at 11:30 this morning.

The child, a second grade pupil at the Niles Grammar school, was living with her mother, Mrs. Emily Morilla, on Ray street. Others in the family are Dolores, Tony, Joseph and Joaquin.

Funeral services were held from the Morilla home at 8:45 o'clock Tuesday morning, with mass following at the Corpus Christi church, Niles, at 9:00 o'clock. Burial was in the Holy Ghost cemetery, at Centerville.

POST-AUXILIARY WILL ENTERTAIN CHILDREN HERE

Children of Washington township war veterans will be guests of the American Legion Post and Auxiliary 195 Monday night, at the annual Christmas party, to be held at the Veterans' Memorial building, Niles.

A program and entertainment, arranged under the direction of Mrs. Florence Campos, will be given, featuring Christmas carols, poems and readings. Children will take the principal parts. Santa Claus will be on hand to distribute candy to the tots, with refreshments to follow at the close of the evening.

Mrs Angie Furtado is general chairman for the affair.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Shinn, Jr., go to Indiana for Visit

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Shinn, Jr., left Friday on a trip to Peru, Indiana, where they will spend the holidays with Mr. and Mrs. Chalkley, Mrs. Shinn's parents. They made the trip by automobile, driving over the southern route. The trip home will be the first for Mrs. Shinn since her marriage two years ago. Her parents visited here last summer for a short time.

JUNIORS ELECT 1936 OFFICERS MONDAY NIGHT

Sam Kerns Returned To Office by Huge Majority

Sam Kerns, dynamic president of the Niles Junior Chamber of Commerce, was returned to office Monday night by an overwhelming majority, when the juniors met at the Niles Grammar school for their annual election of officers.

Other officials named to serve in 1936 are: vice-president, J. N. Viveiros; secretary, Paul Donovan; treasurer, Louis Di Guilio; directors, Barney Briochi, Guido Tuana, Norman Rose and L. Pine. Another director will be chosen next week, when a tie vote between Howard Denton and Milton Fournier is re-ballotted.

Preceding the election, the juniors launched into a strenuous business session at which details of the coming New Year's frolic were discussed, and plans completed for the "kids' Christmas party," to be held at the Niles theatre next Tuesday.

Barney Briochi and Joe Pioletti are chairmen of the dance and theatre party committees.

Acting to make Niles safer for school children, the juniors brought up the question of a traffic patrol here, as well as a bus system for the children. E.

PEREZ MUST ANSWER TO HIGH COURT ON GUN CHARGE

Appearing before Judge J. A. Silva this week for hearing on his participation in an alleged disturbance at Decoto recently, Escubio Perez, Decoto man, was held to answer before the superior court. He is charged with assault with a deadly weapon and unlawful possession of a weapon. He has been convicted on a felony count before, police records show. He waived arraignment.

Perez was arrested after he had allegedly drawn a gun on A. Cardona, Decoto pool hall proprietor, who struck the weapon up before Perez could fire.

Perez was represented by Public Defender Raymond Ferrario, while Stanley Smallwood handled the case for the prosecution. Perez was returned to the county jail in lieu of $5000 bail.

Woman Fined $100 For Driving While Drunk

Mrs. Sue Morrison, of Oakland, arrested on the Niles-Hayward highway for drunken driving last Wednesday night, was fined $100 Thursday morning, when she appeared before Judge Jacob Harder, at Hayward. The arrest was made by Highway Patrolman Clarence Avillar.

ing to locate officers to quiet the affair. It was not until they called the Hayward sheriff's office that help was obtained. Deputy Sheriff Hugo Radbruch, Inspector George Hard and Constable Vincent Stroebel arrived in time to arrest Valim and Principe after the two had left the restaurant. Constable O. W. Ebright, whom the grill proprietors could not reach, was on duty at the Hayward office, having been summoned earlier in the day.

Complaints against the two youths were sworn to by Mrs. Pete Kallas, who charged peace disturbance against both; by Mrs. Wehren, who charged Principe with peace disturbance, and by McHugh, who brought charges of battery against Valim.

Mr. and Mrs. Wehren, well-known Irvington people, were shocked and upset by the affair.

Principe and Valim were both held in lieu of $350 bail set by Judge J. A. Silva last week. Principe will be represented by C. W. White, Hayward attorney.

Following the rumpus, Niles residents questioned the police system, under which it is impossible to get an officer at once. It is the general opinion that if the sheriff's office calls Constable Ebright out of town, they should supply a substitute officer during his absence, or better still, locate a branch of the sheriff's office here, as was the plan last year.

CHAMBER TO ASK SCHOOL CROSSINGS FOR FIRST STREET

Action Is Brought About By Tragic Death of Child Monday

Resolved to do their utmost to prevent recurrance of the tragic accident that snuffed out the life of eight-year-old Rofel Morilla Monday morning, the Niles Chamber of Commerce voted this week to ask that definite school crossing zones be painted on First street The motion followed a discussion of possible plans, among which was formation of a junior traffic patrol.

With E. A. Ellsworth chairman, assisted by George Bonde and A. J. Petsche, the committee, appointed Monday, will designate most desirable points for the crossings, and request that the division of highways inspect the points in question. The highway division will be asked to paint the lines and the necessary warning on the pavement. From discussion at the meeting, it appears that the civic group will ask two crossings, one situated at the southeastern end of town so that it will be visible to traffic coming in both directions, and another at the intersection of First and I streets, near the flagpole. It was pointed out that under present conditions, children on their way to and from school cross First street through the heavy traffic all the way from Marble's service station to a point south of the Shuckl cannery buildings. Under the proposed plan, the children would be instructed to cross at the points designated. It is is expected that school authorities will be contacted in the matter, and an educational safety campaign started.

At the present time school crossings are painted on Second street, having been placed by county authorities. It is thought that those proposed for First street are of even greater necessity.

Other business at the meeting consisted of a vote to have Jack Alberg, president of the Washington Township Townsend Club, arrange to have a speaker on the plan address the chamber next Monday.

Mrs. B. L. Nilson will leave tomorrow, to spend the holidays with Mr. and Mrs. William Cross, at Alameda. Mrs. Cross is the former Miss Pamela Nilson.

STRIPED BASS CLUB BARBECUE LURES OVER 100

Lured by savory barbecued beef and Mrs. Fred Rogers famous beans, well over 100 members of the Washington Township Striped Bass club gathered at the Bell building last night, to enjoy the first annual barbecue and get-together. The entertainment was as good as the feed, members said.

Gathered around the barbecue pit, the assemblage enjoyed movies, accordian solos by John Accinelli and other entertaining features. Guests were on hand from the San Jose Rod and Gun club, and from other sportsmen's organizations. Joe R. Nunes presided.

Chairman of the barbecue committee was M. J. Bernardo.

DRUIDS ENTERTAIN AT ANNUAL CHRISTMAS PARTY HERE

Santa Claus chose a window, in the absence of a suitable chimney at the Druid's Christmas party Monday night, when more than 200 members, friends and children gathered at Anderson hall. The occasion was the annual Yule frolic given by the grove.

Pat Francis, as St. Nicholas, distributed candy and apples to the wide-eyed children, then retired to make way for the entertainment. Esther Jason played piano solos; Miss Brown rendered a number of accordian selections; Miss Hoffman sang, as did Harriet De Leon. Mabel Lewis accompanied the latter. The small son of Mr. and Mrs. John Dutra recited a Christmas piece.

Among the prominent guests was A. R. Mossio, grand treasurer, of San Francisco.

Chairmen for the affair was A. E. Francis, assisted by A. E. Alameda.

Mrs. Joseph Furtado, president of the Altar society, announces that the organization will meet next Thursday at Parish hall. The time is 2 p. m.

COMMUNITY XMAS TREE IS ADDED TO LIONS WORKS

Tree Lit For First Time In Years Here On Monday Evening

Extending their numerous activities to include another task, the Centerville Lions Club is this week enjoying the glow of their huge outdoor Christmas tree, which is to become an annual institution with the group. The tree, situated in the "Centerville park," on Southern Pacific property, was lit for the first time Monday night.

It is the first community Christmas tree the town of Centerville has set up for three years. Prior to 1932, the Centerville Chamber of Commerce had undertaken to light a tree.

Committeemen in charge of the light arrangement are Joe Jason, chairman; Fred Rogers, Ed. Lauppe, Tony Enos and A. J. Petsche. The wires and lights were installed by Henry Enos, of the Centerville Electric Company.

While the tree burns brightly, the Lions are industriously going about compiling the list of families to receive Christmas baskets. Fred Rogers, chairman, stated that about twenty baskets will be distributed to needy Centerville families. The baskets contain the ingredients for a complete holiday dinner.

CENTERVILLE SIREN TO SOUND HOURS HENCEFORTH

Eliminating plans for a "Lion's roar whistle," the Centerville Lions Club, acting in conjunction with the Centerville fire department, has installed a special time clock and automatic relay on the fire siren, and will use that device to sound the hours.

Installed this week, the siren sounds the hours of 8 a. m., noon and 5 p. m. each day except Sunday, when noon only will be sounded. The siren will also be heard at 7 p. m. on Monday nights to call the firemen to drill.

According to Joe Jason, who has been active in arranging for some sort of community whistle, the hours will be sounded by one long blast. The regular alarms will remain the same: two blasts for blazes in town and three for fires in the outlying districts.

"MARKET NIGHT" IS PLANNED BY K. C. COUNCIL HERE

Something new in entertainment will be featured at the next regular meeting of the Centerville council, Knights of Columbus, next Thursday night, when "market night" will be held. The place is the Parish hall, and Tom Maloney, grand knight, urges all members to be on hand.

Manuel Lewis, chairman of the "market" feature, explains that a huge basket of groceries, containing all manner of fine foods, will be given away to some member in the hall.

Husker C Team Ends Season With Victory

Friday the thirteenth proved a lucky day for the Washington High school class "C" basketball team, when they nosed out the Albany lightweights at Berkeley by a score of 27 to 22.

With the lead bouncing back and forth for three quarters, the Husker Babies came through late in the last canto to sink two field goals and a foul to sew up the victory.

The game ended a rather tasteless season for the Centerville boys, who finished fourth in a five-team circle.

REDUCED ELECTRIC RATES

Electric Service Costs Steadily Reduced for Our Customers

Electric rates have dropped steadily and consistently since 1928.

In 1928 electric rate cut saved our customers $2,418,900 yearly.

In 1930 electric rates again saved our customers $3,020,000 more yearly.

In 1935 an inducement rate saved our customers $1,600,000 in one year.

Now in 1935-1936 reduced electric rates save our customers $3,924,000 yearly.

Now more than ever electricity is the Biggest Bargain in Your Home.

BEFORE this month is out, you will be using cheaper electricity—much cheaper now than ever before. Many families will save enough on the electric bill each month under the reduced electric rates beginning with January bills, to receive much added service at little or no additional cost, depending upon their monthly use of electricity. To take advantage of the savings from the new low electric rates, many families right now are buying electrical gifts for Christmas.

Electrical Servants Cost So Little —Do So Much

What electrical servants does your family want for Christmas? Is it one of the new electric refrigerators? How about a really good reading lamp for your living room? Or perhaps housework can be made easier with a modern vacuum cleaner, washing machine or ironer? Then do not forget about a new radio, electric clock, sandwich grill, percolator, toaster, coffee maker or waffle iron. Many of these appliances, depending upon the amount of electricity you regularly use, can be operated for weeks and months with the savings from your added use of electricity under the reduced electric rates.

Electricity does more for you in your home and costs less than anything you buy. Let us help you plan to receive greatest benefit from the new low electric rates. Call at our office or 'phone for our representative.

Commitment Withheld In School Attendance Case

Failure to send his children to school netted a ninety-day sentence in the county jail Monday for Joseph Silveria, of Centerville, when he appeared at the Centervile justice court before Judge A. Gale, of Pleasanton, who was called in to hear the case. Judge Allen G. Norris, clerk of the board of trustees for the Centerville Grammar school, disqualified himself.

Commitment was withheld when Silveria promised to comply with the compulsory school attendance law in the future. He had given a lack of proper clothing as the reason for keeping the children at home.

Judge Norris had originally asked Judge Bruener, of San Leandro, to hear the case. He asked Judge Gale, when Bruener sent word he would be unable to come.

MADRUGA CONCLUDES ACTIVE YEAR AS EXECUTIVE

Looking back over an active year, in which he brought about a number of important legislative actions, Frank Madruga, Centerville assistant fire chief, completed his term as president of the Alameda County Firemen's Association Monday night. New officers were named at the meeting, held at Emeryville.

Among the most important of Madruga's works, is the ordinance, now near approval, requiring that school buildings be inspected regularly, and that a uniform set of fire prevention regulations be imposed. Many other counties in the state have taken up the suggestion. Standardization of hydrants by color is another of the association's accomplishments under Madruga's regime. He also brought about permission for rural chiefs to have sirens and red lights on their cars.

In retiring from the presidency of the county group, Madruga automatically becomes a member of the executive board, which is the central controlling body of the association.

New officers, elected Monday night: president, Chief Martin, of Oakland; first vice-president, Captain Casey, of Berkeley; second vice-president, Chief Crawford Latham, of Pleasanton; third vice-president, Chief Tom Lane, of Alameda; secretary, Carl Geppest, of Oakland; treasurer, Chief Frank Sandy, of Oakland.

Visiting firemen were on hand from Menlo Park, Stockton, and various points in Contra Coita county.

P.-T. A. ARRANGES 5 XMAS BASKETS FOR NEEDY

Five Christmas baskets, filled with groceries and goodies furnished by the children of the Centerville Grammar school, were prepared for distribution Tuesday afternoon by members of the Parent-Teachers Association, under under the supervision of Mrs. Fred Rogers, chairman. The baskets will be distributed Monday by Mrs. Rogers and Principal Tom Maloney to families suggested by health center authorities.

A tentative date for a card party was set for early in February by the group, for the purpose of raising funds needed for projects in 1936. Mrs. Loren Marriott is chairman.

Plans were made to assist at the closing exercises, to be held at the school tonight.

BENEFIT WHIST

A benefit whist party will be given at the Alviso school Saturday night for the children of the Sunday school. The affair is to be arranged by the parents.

MORE ON JUNIORS ELECT

Dixon Bristow, school principal, on hand at the meeting, stated that he considered the patrol plan a favorable one, and advised the juniors to get in touch with David E. Martin, to learn of laws governing the formation of such units. He said also that the bus plan should be submitted to Martin. Romeo Brunelli was named chairman of a committee to look into these matters.

Following the appointment of several more committeemen, talks were heard from Harvey Braun, John Brown, Bill Cavanaugh and Mrs. Marian Zwissig, president of the Parent-Teachers group, who served the dinner at the meet.

Installation of officers will be held on January 20 at a huge public meeting, slated for the Veterans' Memorial building. William H. Ford, prominent bay region businessman, will be asked to deliver the talk of the evening.

Important in the business session was the voting of a sum of money to the Niles Parent-Teachers Association, to help pay for the Christmas dinner, to be served to the children at the school today.

ENTERTAINMENT AT MASONIC HOME SATURDAY

A program of entertaining features, the musical portion of which was arranged and directed by Mrs. Eliza Felter, pianist, was enjoyed at the Masonic home Saturday night. The home members and near-by outside talent furnished sixteen numbers.

Starting with a piano and violin duet by Mrs. Felter and Isador Franck, the units included accordian selections by Marie Morue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Morue, of Decoto; vocal duets by Mrs. Virginia Lord, of the home, and Miss Sophie Swanson, of Decoto; piano solos by Leonara Pieracci, vocal solos by Miss Swanson and duets by Mrs. Lord and Pieracci. Other numbers were contributed by George Hyde. The final number of the program was an ensemble of the entertainers.

At the close of the program ice cream and cookies were served, under the direction of Matron Richardson and Superintendent Hartman. The latter officials participated in the program, opening the "Virginia Reel." Music for the reel was supplied by Mrs. Felter, Isador Frank and John Hedey.

Lars Alseth, of Los Angeles, a member of the Sierra club, reports a pleasant evening in San Francisco, where he recently attended a reunion of his chapter. Col. White, national park manager was one of the main speakers.

Isador Frank, home violinist, celebrated his eighty-eighth birthday on December 9.

James H. Heath, Masonic home correspondent for the Township Register, has returned from an extended sojourn as the guest of friends in San Diego and Los Angeles.

Nothing for the Ostrich But to Become Zoo Freak

The ostrich is difficult to raise. To begin with, it is not a prolific bird. Under satisfactory climatic conditions it lays at but one season of the year, the eggs numbering about a dozen. The period of incubation for hatching covers 42 days. The male takes turns at setting, going on duty, religiously every evening, to be relieved by his mate at daybreak.

The young chicks are extremely delicate. The parents must be immediately removed, lest they step on their offspring or rob them of their food. Eggs and lettuce constitute the young birds' diet, to which eventually may be added alfalfa, cut into minute pieces. Even with the best of care and attention 75 per cent of the young ones die.

Once grown, however, the ostrich formerly became a perennial source of wealth. Each year as the male developed his gorgeous plumage for the mating season—thus winning the favor of the impressionable female—he was stripped of tail and wing feathers, which were curled, dyed and then shipped to all parts of the world. Now there is nothing left for the ostrich but to join a zoo or a beach resort side show.

Blast Furnace Operates Without Any Shutdowns

The process of smelting ore into metal is accomplished in a blast furnace, the metallic product being a high-carbon alloy of iron called pig iron and containing more or less silicon and manganese. A blast furnace, as described by a writer in the Chicago Tribune, is a tall (often more than 100 feet high), cylindrical, bricklined metal stack in which the ore is melted in the presence of limestone and burning coke. A blast of heated dry air is forced through the furnace from the bottom to intensify the heat of the burning coke, the more readily to melt the iron in the ore. A blast furnace operates continuously once it is lighted. The charge of ore, coke and limestone is admitted through the top of the furnace, and, as it is consumed, it is replenished at regular intervals. In practice a charge of two tons of 50 per cent ore, one ton of coke, and a half ton of limestone, to which four tons of air are added in the blasting process, produces one ton of pig iron, one-half ton of slag, and six tons of gases. The gases are captured and used for various purposes, such as heating the blast.

The pig iron drawn off is either cast into pigs (sand molds) or poured into giant ladles and carried while yet molten to nearby steel furnaces. The slag, or residue of the ore, coke, and limestone, fused solidly into a uniform substance, is drawn off and eventually utilized in making cinder blocks for road building, as roofing material, or for some other similar purposes.

Starlings Are Mockers

The Bureau of Biological Survey says that the starling belongs to a different family Sturnidae from the mocking bird family Mimidae; however, almost all members of the starling family are mockers. The starling has been known in England to imitate as many as 53 bird songs.

Once Under Sea

Early in the formation of this continent the interior lowlands of North America were under sea. When the water receded, there were left layers of sedimentary rock. In most areas the main drainage was on the surface, cutting what was once a level ocean floor into its present contours.

Giantism Among Animals

Giantism exists among animals as among men. The famous Lincolnshire ox exhibited in London in 1790 stood five feet six inches at the shoulder and was nearly twelve feet in length. It is said to have weighed two tons eighteen hundredweight.

First English Colony

The first English colony in North America was established on Roanoke island August 17, 1585. It is within a few miles of Kill Devil hill, marked by a monument commemorating the Wright brother's first flight in an airplane.

Chinese "Fu" Dogs

The dogs which appear in Chinese sculpture and art are known as "fu" dogs. Their origin is unknown, but one of the meanings of the word "fu" in Chinese is "good luck," and they probably have a good omen symbolism.

Animals of the Marshes Have Need for Big Ears

Large ears mostly belong to animals that live in open places, marshes or swamps, and feed by daylight. There beasts of prey stalk them through long grass or lie in ambushed thickets, so that the first necessity of safety is to hear unseen foes. The greatest danger of such attacks is from behind, and protection against it accounts for the rabbit's long ears—especially those of jack rabbits, in one kind of which the ear equals a quarter the length of the whole body. A rabbit's life is spent on the ground, usually where there is little chance to hide, and it can escape death only by a quick jump and great speed. For warning of the stealthy approach of an enemy it must depend almost wholly on its ears. Between alarms these "sounding-boards" lie flat on Bunny's back, and he becomes almost invisible in his earth-colored coat. At the slightest suspicious noise up they rise.—Montreal Herald.

Charing Cross' Name

Up to the time of Charles II, Charing Cross stood among the fields in London. The name is derived from the Saxon word charrynge, meaning a turning. In 1291 Edward I erected at Charing the last of 13 crosses which marked the route of the funeral procession of his wife, Eleanor, from Grantham, Lincolnshire, to Westminster. The cross was taken down in 1647. A modern memorial stands inside the Charing Cross station yard. It will be remembered that Eleanor journeyed with Edward I to the Holy Land and sucked the poison from a wound dealt her husband by a Moor.

SHIFTING SANDS

By Sara Ware Bassett

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—The future of the still youthful and comely "Widder" Marcia Howe, recently released by death from her idling, selfish husband, is a conversational tit-bit among the housewives of the little hamlet of Wilton. Eligible bachelors and widowers also are interested.

CHAPTER II.—Marcia, despite her unfortunate matrimonial experience, finds pleasure in her daily life, but is lonely at times, and has invited her late husband's niece, Sylvia Hayden, whom she has never seen, to visit her. The girl arrives and Marcia takes to her at once, while Sylvia, expecting to see a somewhat elderly aunt, finds Marcia more like a sister.

CHAPTER III.—Into the uneventful, happy lives of the two women comes "Adventure." A stranger, on the verge of exhaustion, finds his way to Marcia's home. Cared for, he explains that his power-boat ran aground in the fog. His wrist is injured. Secretly, he asks Marcia to hide a package containing jewelry. She does so. The doctor comes, with Elisha Winslow, town sheriff, bringing the news of a jewel robbery on a neighboring Long Island estate. The stranger, hospitably put to bed, gives his name as Stanley Heath.

CHAPTER IV.—Marcia says nothing to Sylvia about the jewels Heath had asked her to hide. Though uneasy, she is unwilling, for some reason, to believe him to be a thief. Sylvia, by chance, discovers the jewels. A handkerchief with the initials "S. C. H." convinces her that Heath is author of the robbery. Sheriff Winslow had reported, and she realizes that Marcia herself must have hidden them. Deciding to say nothing, she puts the jewels back in their hiding place.

CHAPTER V.—Marcia admits to herself that she has altogether too deep an interest in her guest, but is powerless to overcome it. Unable to write because of his injured wrist, Heath has Marcia wire "Mrs. S. C. Heath," New York, saying he is safe. He also wires orders to a man named Currier to come at once. Sylvia, in her room, bedecks herself with the jewels. At Marcia's approach she hides them there. Heath asks Marcia to bring him the jewels. They are gone! Terror-stricken, she informs Heath. He kindly makes light of the loss. Sylvia has a letter from Horatio Fuller, "boy friend" in her home town, Alton City. Seizing an opportunity, she restores the jewels to their original hiding place.

CHAPTER VI.—Eleazer Crocker, fire chief, one of Marcia's "admirers," brings a telegram for Heath. Sylvia being away, he deems it an opportune time to "pop the question" to Marcia, but her tender thoughts are busy with her stranger guest. Elisha Winslow, arriving with the news of a fire in the village, sends Eleazer hastily home. Elisha, by accident, discovers the jewels, and has no doubt they are the stolen gems, and that Heath is the thief. Saying nothing to Marcia, but replacing the jewels, he returns to the village to make plans, with Eleazer Crocker, for arresting Heath.

CHAPTER VII.—Currier arrives. Marcia overhears Heath, seemingly gloatingly, describe how he acquired the gems, and is forced to believe him guilty. At Heath's suggestion, Currier, with Marcia, investigates the hiding place—and finds the gems! Currier returns to New York with them, but his seemingly many casual references to "Mrs. Heath" have convinced Marcia that her tender dream has been a foolish one.

CHAPTER VIII.—After having their own troubles, Elisha and Eleazer return to arrest Heath. Marcia is indignant, and unwittingly reveals to Sylvia the secret of her love. The jewels, of course, are not where the sheriff has seen them, though Marcia admits they had been there, but claims they are Heath's.

CHAPTER IX.—To Sylvia, Marcia admits that she loves Heath. She still has faith in his innocence. While Sylvia is sure of his guilt, she declares she will help him escape, which Marcia is unwilling to do. Marcia tells Heath she believes him innocent, but urges him, if he is guilty, to confess. He admits nothing, though obviously gratified by her trust and almost acknowledged love.

CHAPTER X.—Heath compels Marcia to admit she loves him, also telling her he is going to give himself up to the sheriff. She insists this must be the end of their association, and he, thinking she will not face the "disgrace," reproaches and leaves her, going into "custody" in the sheriff's house. To Marcia's dismay he leaves a check, to pay for her hospitality! "Hortie" Fuller arrives, seeking Sylvia.

CHAPTER XI.—Secretly overjoyed, the girl simulates coyness, but he has brought the engagement ring, and she capitulates. With him, after a partial explanation of the situation at the Howe home, she goes to see Heath.

"I could have told you about the jewels and how I came by them at the outset had I not suddenly conceived the idea of teasing you. The plan to conceal my story came to me as a form of sport—a subtle, psychological game. Here I was pitched without ceremony into a strange environment among persons who knew nothing of my background. What would they make of me? How rate me when cut off from my real setting? I resolved to try out the experiment. Women are said to be inquisitive, particularly those living in isolation. My advent could not but stimulate questions. I thought it would be an amusing adventure to circumvent not only your curiosity but also that of the village.

"I placed scant dependence on feminine discernment and constancy.

"When I went to the war, I left behind a girl who pledged herself to love and wait for me. When I came back it was to find her married to my best friend. The discovery shook my confidence in human nature, and especially in women, to its foundations. I derided love, vowing I never would marry and be made a puppet of a second time.

"The remainder of the story you know.

"I stumbled, a stranger, into your home and instantly you set at naught all my preconceived theories of womanhood by believing in me with unreasoning faith. You asked no questions. You did not even exhibit a legitimate curiosity in the peculiar network of circumstances that entangled me. You were a new type of being and I regarded you with wonder.

"Still I was not satisfied. I felt sure that if pressed too far your trust in me would crumble and, therefore, I tried deliberately to break it down by throwing obstacles in its pathway. When suspicion closed in upon me I put you to further tests by withholding the explanations I could easily have made. It was a contemptible piece of egoism—selfish and cruel—and dearly have I paid for it. But at least remember that if I caused you suffering I have suffered also.

"For Marcia, through it all I loved you. I recognized from the moment I first looked into your eyes that a force mightier than ourselves drew us together—a force not to be denied. Nevertheless, so bitter had been my experience I dared not yield to this strange new power. Instead I opposed it with all my strength, giving my love reluctantly, fighting inch by inch the surrender I sensed to be inevitable.

"You, on the other hand, had like myself known betrayal, but you had taken the larger view and not allowed it to warp or mar your outlook on life. When love came knocking a second time, you were neither too proud nor too cowardly to answer it, but freely gave your affection with the gladness and sincerity so characteristic of you.

"I do not deserve such a love.

"Beside the largeness of your nature my own shows itself childish—a small, poor thing for which I blush.

"Help me to erase the past.

"I love you with my whole soul, dear. Everything in me loves you. My life is worth nothing unless you share it.

"Will you?

"Ah, you need not fear, Marcia. Sylvia has told me everything. Between us, there is not and never has been a barrier to our marriage. We have misunderstood one another. Let us do so no longer.

"I am a free man—acquitted. Come to me and let us begin life afresh."

She came then, swiftly.

As he held her in his arms, the last shadow that separated them melted away.

them and, throwing her arms about Marcia, kissed her.

"Everything is all right—I can see that," she cried. "Oh, I am so glad—so glad for both of you! I believe I just could not stand it if you were not happy, because I am so happy myself. Hortie is here, you know. Didn't Stanley tell you? Why, Stanley Heath, aren't you ashamed to forget all about Hortie and me? Yes, Hortie came this morning. We're engaged. See my ring!"

"Ring!" repeated Heath. "Mercy on us, Marcia, you must have a ring. I cannot allow this young sprite of a niece to outdo you. I am afraid I was not as foresighted as Mr. Fuller, however. Still, I can produce a ring, such as it is. Here, dear, you shall wear this until I can get something better."

He slipped from his little finger the wrought-gold ring with its beautifully cut diamond.

"I—I—do not need a ring," murmured she, drawing back and putting her hands nervously behind her.

"Of course you do," interposed Sylvia. "How absurd! A ring is part of being engaged."

"A very, very small part," Marcia answered.

"Nevertheless, it is a part," the girl insisted. "Come, don't be silly. Let Stanley put it on."

Playfully she caught Marcia's hands and imprisoning them, drew them forward.

On the left one glistened a narrow gold band.

"Jason's!" cried Sylvia. "Jason's! Take it off and give it to me. You owe nothing to Jason. Even I, a Howe, would not have you preserve longer that worn out allegiance, neither would my mother. The past is dead. You have closed the door upon it. You said so yourself. Never think of it again. You belong to Stanley now—to Stanley and to no one else."

As she spoke, Sylvia took the ring from the older woman's hand and held it high in the air.

"The past is dead," she repeated, "and the last reminder of it—is—gone."

There was a gleam as the golden band spun aloft and catching an instant the sunlight's glory, disappeared beneath the foam that marked the line of the incoming breakers.

"Now, Stanley, put your ring upon her finger. It is a symbol of a new life, of hope, of happier things. Isn't it so, Marcia?"

"Yes! Yes!"

Sylvia drew a long breath.

"There! Now we'll not be serious a minute longer. This is the greatest day of our lives. There must not be even a shadow in our heaven. Kiss me, Marcia, and come and meet Hortie. Poor dear! He is paralyzed with fright at the thought of appearing into your presence. I left him hiding behind the door. I could not coax him out of the house."

"How ridiculous! You must have made me out an ogre."

"On the contrary, I made you out an enchantress. I told him you would bewitch him. That's why he became panic-stricken. Do be nice to him—for my sake. He really is a lamb."

Sylvia stepped to the piazza.

"Horatio," called she imperiously. "Come out here right away and meet your Aunt Marcia. And please, Stanley, forgive me for mistaking you for a bandit. I'm dreadfully mortified. Still, you must admit circumstantial evidence was strong against you. All of which proves on what shifting sands rest our moral characters!"

"Say rather our reputations, dear child," Heath corrected.

A Dash of Local Color

By NELSON S. BOND

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

CHET ANDERSON, grinning broadly, slid into a seat beside mine at Tony's.

"I've got time for one drink," he decided. "Then I've got to scoot over to the office. Just about make the deadline."

"Since when did you start writing deadline stuff?" I scoffed. "I thought the obit column was your specialty."

"One of Brown's brainstorms," explained Chet. "He's turned me into a sort of male sob-sister. I take a ride into the sticks every afternoon and come back with a local color jag on. I've got the biggest howl here in my pocket. . . ." He tapped a couple of sheets of folded copy paper. "This story will knock 'em right off their pins. It's a natural. Let me tell you about it.

"I was driving along a road down East Orange way when I saw this old hick leaning on a rail fence, chewing a blade of grass and looking at the sky to see if it would rain tomorrow. He was the typical stage 'Rube' if ever I saw one. One slant at him and I knew I had my story for the day. I pulled up the car.

"'Hyah, Pop!' I said, 'How's tricks?'

"'Wal,' he opined, 'things could be better; they could be wuss.'

"'Guess it's pretty noisy around here sometimes,' I said, taking a squint at the vacant fields and the lonely road, 'when all the folks come down to market.'

"Well, you'd have died laughing. I don't think the old boy quite knew whether I was kidding or serious. He just stood there looking at me.

"'Never very busy around these parts, Son,' he says, 'but there sure is lots of time for thinkin'.'

"I laughed. 'That might be all right for you, old timer,' I told him, 'but give me the Broadway glims every time. I'd get the jitters out here.'

"'Does a man good to do some thinkin' once in a while,' drawls the old fellow.

"'Maybe so,' I said, 'but in my business you have to act first and do your thinking afterward. I'm a newspaper reporter.'

"He nodded; sort of impressed.

"'I've done a mite of writin' myself,' he says, finally, 'long time sence.'

"'Well,' I said, 'why didn't you stick to it?'

"'I gave it up,' said the old geezer seriously. 'I found that I couldn't worry and fret about handsome writin' and still live happy.'

"'Now, that was a shame,' I said, trying not to grin in his face. 'You might have become real famous if you'd kept at it.'

"'Oh, I still do a little,' he says earnestly . . . 'mebbe a page or two a day. Seems like it eases my mind a bit. But I don't work too hard at it.'

"A page or two a day—can you beat it? It tickled me when I thought of the hundreds of good men here in the city slapping out thousands of words a day and never even getting to first base. I felt a little bit sorry for the old duffer.

"'Tell you what I'll do,' I said. 'Send me some of the stuff you've written some time, and if it's any good I'll try to fix it up and sell it for you. I've sold some things myself to magazines and newspapers. Maybe with a little revising by somebody that knows the ropes your stuff will do for the syndicates.'

"The rube grins sort of sheepishly. 'Oh,' he says, 'I reckon I'll just go yammerin' along my own way.'

"Well, I gave him my name, all the time trying my best to hold back the chuckles, but after I got down the road a piece I had to stop and let it out. Honest, I thought I'd never make it back home, I was that tickled. I wrote the whole darned story down a little while ago—and boy! does it look goofy on paper! Can't you see the headline?

'UNKNOWN GENIUS WILL NOT MOVE TO CITY.

Happy Where I Am, Says Local Shakespeare.'

New York will be nuts about it."

Chet chuckled and finished off his drink. I took a newspaper out of my pocket and unfolded it curiously. "Say, Chet," I said, "do you ever read the Dispatch?"

"That rag?" said Chet. "I should say not! I stick to the Advertiser."

"I was wondering," I said. "There's a syndicated daily column in here under the byline of E. Rowe—the Sage of Pumpkin Corner. They call him the grand old man of letters. His column this evening starts out, 'I met myself today—myself as I was nigh onto twenty years ago. A young man, fresh as a newly painted whip handle, and cocky as a gingerbread cake came to our little country retreat to teach us how to live. . . .'"

Chet clutched at the paper. "Let me see that!" he muttered thickly.

"It's almost midnight, Chet," I warned him. "You'll miss your deadline."

He flung the paper to the floor. "T'ell with it!" he grunted. "Let's have another drink!"

Vitamins Needed by Farm Animals

Sun-Cured Hay of Half Alfalfa or Clover for Young Stock.

By Prof. L. A. Maynard, New York State College of Agriculture.—WNU Service.

Farm animals need certain vitamins as do people; and in dairy feeds vitamins A and D need special attention. Animals on good pasture will always receive plenty of both vitamins, and the sunlight supplies vitamin D regardless of the character of the feed.

In barn feeding the needs of calves and young stock can be met by feeding sun-cured hay which is at least one-half alfalfa or clover. This feed should always be a part of the calf's ration for several other reasons.

If very poor hay must be fed, the addition of a concentrate of the vitamins to the ration may be desirable. With milking animals the main effect of feeds low in vitamins is to decrease the vitamins in the milk. Only in extreme situations is the feed so low as to affect milk production or the cow herself.

Without vitamin D the calf will suffer from rickets as do children. The most common symptoms are stiffness, swollen hocks, and a tendency of the animal to stand with the back humped.

When calves do not receive enough vitamin A their legs become swollen, they lose their appetite, growth becomes poor, they become partially blind, and a nasal discharge is likely to take place.

Proves Smutted Corn Is Not Injurious to Cattle

Whether fed dry or as silage, smutted corn will not be harmful when fed to cattle, says Dr. W. L. Boyd of the St. Paul university farm division of veterinary medicine. Corn smut is quite prevalent this year and some farmers have been fearful that this condition would be detrimental to cattle.

Doctor Boyd recommends, however, that small amounts of the corn be fed until the cattle have become used to it, so as to avoid digestive disturbances. This is always a good precaution in starting on any kind of different feed, especially when the feed may be "off" in quality.

Experiments at the South Dakota State college have indicated that smutted silage is not harmful, cows fed on such silage making good gains in weight and calving normally. Michigan experiments indicate also that smut on corn is not harmful to the health of animals.

The Kansas station relates that one farmer, believing that corn smut was likely to produce the corn stalk disease of cattle, gathered the smut from his field. One night his cattle broke into the enclosure where the smutty corn was stored and ate all they wished, with no injurious effects.

Wheat, Rye Seed Need Special Scab Treatment

Because of the epidemic of scab on small grains this year, the disinfecting of winter wheat and rye seed is especially important this fall, says Dr. J. J. Christensen, plant disease specialist, University farm, St. Paul. The scab organism also causes rotting of the seed, seedling blight, and root-rot. Seed treatment is also important for the prevention of sinking smut of wheat and of smut and ergot of rye.

Before treating, seed should be thoroughly fanned to throw out light and diseased kernels and to eliminate smut balls and ergot bodies. When rye contains considerable ergot, fanning may not be enough. Immersing the rye in a strong brine will bring the ergot to the top where it can be skimmed off. The brine should contain 40 pounds of common salt to each 25 gallons of water. Afterwards, the rye should be washed in water to remove the excess salt.

For either rye or wheat, the treatment recommended is dusting with New Improved Ceresan at the rate of one-half ounce per bushel. Treated grain should stand for at least 24 hours before planting and may be stored for months if desired.

Stop That Gully!

The practice of plowing all ground between slopes is harmful. Where run-off water must collect and flow during extreme rains, says the Missouri Farmer, the soil should not be disturbed, instead every effort should be made to establish a wide sod strip throughout the length of such swales, in order to prevent or control damaging gully erosion. The stopping of ditches from cutting into both cultivated and pasture land forms one of the most important phases of soil erosion control.

Farm Water Systems

Using pipe that is too small is one of the commonest mistakes in farm water systems, says A. G. Tyler, agricultural engineer, Minnesota University farm. Ordinarily, one-inch pipe is the smallest that should be used. Small pipe cuts down the pressure tremendously between the pressure tank and the point of delivery.

Soy Beans Cause Soft Pork Losses

Oil Meal Produces Faster, More Economical Gains, Is Expert's Version.

By Prof. Sleeter Bull, Associate Chief in Meats, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

A record crop of soy beans this year will mean heavy losses from soft pork if farmers attempt to use the whole soy bean for fattening hogs. While whole soy beans cause soft, flabby pork that is of inferior market quality, soy bean oil meal used as a supplement for corn in hog rations will make firm pork. At the same time soy bean oil meal will produce faster and more economical gains than can be obtained with whole beans.

It is suggested that farmers trade any whole beans which they would feed to hogs for soy bean oil meal, thus securing a valuable farm-grown protein supplement for their corn and at the same time avoiding the risk of soft pork losses.

It is to the advantage and profit of farmers to do everything possible to avoid soft pork, since neither shippers, feeders, meat packers, exporters nor consumers want such meat. The soft pork problem may become so serious that "soft" hogs will have to be discriminated against. A few loads of such hogs from any shipping point would be sufficient to give that territory a reputation for inferior pork, with the subsequent danger of price penalties to producers.

An added inducement for using soy bean oil meal instead of whole say beans is the fact that it produces just as good gains as tankage and linseed meal and at present prices is more economical than these two supplements. Experiments have shown that 14 pounds of soy bean oil meal and four pounds of alfalfa meal are equal to the standard corn belt supplement of eight pounds of tankage, four pounds of linseed meal and four pounds of alfalfa meal. At present prices the soy bean oil meal would be the more economical feed.

Other experiments in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio have demonstrated that soy bean oil meal used to balance corn produces 10 to 20 per cent more rapid gains than whole soy beans, shortens the fattening period one to two months, saves 10 to 20 per cent of the feed and makes firm pork of high quality.

Corn and soy bean oil meal fed at the rate of one bushel of corn and nine pounds of soy bean oil meal with alfalfa meal makes a good ration for fattening hogs. However, a mineral mixture should always be fed when soy bean oil meal is used in swine rations. A good homemade one can be mixed from two parts ground limestone, two parts steamed bonemeal and one part salt.

Most Poisonous Plants Are Avoided by Animals

As a general rule live stock will not eat poisonous plants unless they are forced to do so because of the scarcity of other feed, or because the other feed is less nutritious, says Cecil Elder of the Missouri College of Agriculture. It may be that the other feed is less palatable or in some way fails to satisfy the animal's appetite and requirements.

In many cases overgrazing of pastures has caused animals to eat plants which they otherwise would leave alone. Fortunately, most poisonous plants are unpalatable, so that as a general rule animals do not readily eat them in sufficient quantities to be seriously injured.

There is considerable variation in different plants as to the poisonous parts and the location of the poisonous principle. It may, in some cases, be confined to the roots; in other cases to the leaves, buds, stems, or seed pods. There are changes in the toxicity of certain plants during growth and drying—some plants being most dangerous in the early growth stages while other plants lose their poisonous properties during drying or curing.

GROWERS WILL ASK HIGHER TOMATO PRICE IN '36

Voting to stand solidly behind their demands for $15 a ton for the 1936 crop of tomatoes, seventy-five growers, representing Washington township and northern Santa Clara county, gathered at the Washington Union High school last week, at the Eden-Washington Farm Center meeting. Herbert Young, chairman, presided.

Young reported on a recent meeting of state tomato growers, held at Berkeley, where it was agreed that the $15 price was necessary for next season. The group also voted to insist upon adoption of Farm Bureau contracts by canners. Growers are urged not to sign open contracts next season.

The next meeting of the center will be held late in January.

would be pressed by the district attorney. At the time of the murders it was thought that the sixteen-year-old boy had been terrorized into accompanying his elder brother, who is now serving a life term at San Quentin prison. The elder Arruda stated at his trial that the boy had no part in the actual shootings.

The double slaying occurred after Manuel Arruda, an ex-marine, had arrived in this district and learned that his mother had died, with rumors that her death had been hastened by the elder Bento's abuse. Following the shooting of the son, which took place in an automobile, the Arrudas went to the Bento ranch, where the father was killed. Manuel was found six months later at Holyoke, Massachusetts, and returned to this district for trial. Frank had not been heard from until found at San Leandro.
